Welcome new shepherd, Archbishop Wilton D. Gregory

“What a gift to have as our archbishop someone who cares so deeply about Catholic Charities and our work for the poor.”

— Msgr. John J. Enzler

Upon his arrival in Washington, Archbishop Gregory's first site visit as the new leader of the archdiocese was to Catholic Charities. The commitment shown in one of his first acts as archbishop of Washington is an inspiration that continues to guide and encourage us in our work.

We are grateful for his presence, support, and leadership.

As Pope Francis often reminds us, we are to encounter one another and engage in acts of service toward one another. In doing this, a genuine connection with our neighbor results in an encounter with the love of Christ.”

Archbishop Wilton D. Gregory

We accomplish great things because of you

Catholic Charities began the last year with earnest goals to build upon the work that has contributed so much to the Washington, D.C. and Maryland community over the years.

Because of our supporters' financial contributions and donations of time, talents, and resources, we have made substantial progress and, in doing so, worked to anticipate and meet the needs of our most vulnerable neighbors.

Our work—and your support—is very much appreciated. Throughout the year, we were moved by the gratitude of the community we serve. Heartfelt “thank yous,” hearty handshakes, and broad smiles greet us daily.

But there's often a much larger response to your gifts of support.

In the articles and images in this report, we share the stories of just a few of the recipients of Catholic Charities' assistance who have gone on to become donors and volunteers themselves.

They were helped, and now in meaningful ways, they help others.

On behalf of them and the many others we serve, thank you for making Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Washington a part of your commitment to helping those in need.

... aided by the commitment and generosity of donors and volunteers

You—volunteers and donors—help ensure that Catholic Charities meets its mission of strengthening the lives of all people in need by giving help that empowers and hope that lasts. The past year brought an increase in volunteer hours supporting our programs and a significant year-over-year increase in pro bono services provided by doctors, dentists, lawyers, accountants, and other professionals. As we reflect on the past year, we remain grateful for the opportunity to serve those in need and devoted to our mission of help and hope.

After Trauma, She Finds Independence and a new life

Perpetua came to the United States more than 10 years ago in hopes of one thing: earning enough money to support her ailing father. Working as a watch repair technician in Goa, India, she contributed what little money she earned to the care of her father, who was paralyzed from a stroke. But it was never enough.

She never considered leaving her family until a distant relative approached her with a job opportunity in America. Lured by the idea of earning more money, she left the only home she had ever known for the promise of helping the people she loved most.

But that promise soon faded.

She moved in with the relative when she arrived in Montgomery County and was told that her immigration paperwork was coordinated and filed. But quickly after Perpetua settled into her new life in Maryland, the relative notified her that she owed $20,000 for the cost of coming to America.

To pay down this “debt,” she was forced to work at an Indian supply store during the day and a gas station at night, in addition to doing housework. Each month, she handed every penny she made over to her host, leaving her nothing to send to her family. Her father ultimately died while she was gone.

After six months, the relative began to physically assault and terrorize her, threatening her with a knife to prevent her from speaking up. The relative confiscated her passport and said she couldn’t return to India. A prisoner in the house, Perpetua was not allowed to leave her room other than to go to work or perform household chores. Her mental health deteriorated from the fear she faced daily, and she experienced intense anxiety, depression, migraines, bloody noses, and extreme weight loss.

After spending five years imprisoned in a new country by someone she thought she could trust, Perpetua felt helpless, scared, and alone. It wasn’t until she reached out to a priest at her local parish that she felt a sense of hope. That initial act of bravery led her to Catholic Charities and its Immigration Legal Services team, which immediately notified police. The team retrieved her passport and eventually helped her secure legal status in the United States. Beyond immigration assistance, Perpetua was connected to Catholic Charities’ health services, where she got the medical and mental health care she so desperately needed.

Today, Perpetua is a wife and mother. She and her husband work hard and sacrifice to ensure their five-year-old son, Nash, can have a bright future. He attends a parochial school, where Perpetua works as a lunchroom supervisor. Her commitment to family is stronger than ever, but her focus now is on the future for Nash, who was fittingly born on July 4th, Independence Day.

I always keep everyone from Catholic Charities in my prayers. They made us who we are today.”

He Who was Welcomed

now welcomes others

Many arrive at the Spanish Catholic Center facility in northwest Washington concerned, frightened or in pain. Just steps into the building, they find understanding and compassion in Gustavo.

He is the facility's greeter, welcoming clients and introducing them to the center's health and dental services, job-training programs, legal services, English classes, and food pantry.

Gustavo knows firsthand about being in need. A teacher, he fled Cuba after being harassed and jailed for his beliefs and arrived in the United States alone and traumatized. Facing health issues, he sought medical treatment at the center.

With a philosophy of integrated care, the center focuses on the whole person. For some clients, this means health and dental treatment for chronic and related conditions, along with mental health counseling. For Gustavo, it has meant access to immigration legal services, English classes and job training, in addition to health care.

"From the moment I entered the building, I felt that I was cared for, that I was heard." In thanks for the life-giving medical help and other support, Gustavo gives back. He volunteers at the center full time.

After facing a perilous future in Cuba, he has found volunteering at the center an opportunity to restore his health after a period of loneliness and stress.

"When someone says, 'Thank you' ... it is the moment when I say to myself 'Lord, thanks to you, I am giving the best of me and, thanks to you, I receive the greatest gift, which is gratitude.'"

Youth Transitional Program

Mentoring by Young Professionals Offers Transitioning Youth

a path to independence

Khalil, a resident of Catholic Charities' Youth Transitional Program (YTP), lacked self-confidence. When volunteers Alex and Bryan worked with him on his resume, he was afraid to highlight skills because he felt that he didn't have any.

2018-2019 highlights

50 young men received transitional shelter services on their path to independent living. 93 volunteers, many of them members of the Enzler Society, mentored and coached them.

At the time, Khalil and the 12 other young men he lived with in the program were transitioning out of homelessness or aging out of foster care—and thus facing an uncertain future.

A detrimental long-term effect of homelessness is an overwhelming sense of isolation, which affects a person's physical, mental, and emotional health—which is particularly harmful to youth.

Catholic Charities works to ensure that homeless clients have opportunities to make healthy connections to break the cycle of isolation. One such way is the volunteer work of the Enzler Society, Catholic Charities' group for young professionals.

These young professionals have been instrumental in forging deeper relationships with YTP residents like Khalil by committing to work and spend time with the residents on a regular basis. In collaboration with the residents, the Enzler Society plans outings to sites like the Bible Museum, the National Portrait Gallery, and even a Washington Nationals game.

They also work closely with homeless youth on financial literacy issues and professional development, including resume building, conducting mock interviews, and inviting guest speakers to open their minds to the possibilities available to them.

These activities not only help foster a greater sense of connection, but they also help prepare the residents to transition out of the shelter system to successful independent lives.

“Having other young adults as mentors for our youth in YTP means that the world can open up for these youth. Mentors provide encouragement and care in a way that staff sometimes can’t,” said Amanda Chesney, executive director of Housing and Homeless Services for Catholic Charities.

These relationships have helped the YTP residents blossom. Residents, like Chris, had always been quiet. But after a trip to the Bible Museum, he opened up to Bryan and Alex when they spent time with him one on one.

Bryan and Alex also worked diligently with Khalil, who was able to overcome his lack of self-esteem to build a marketable resume.

In mentoring, members of the Enzler Society have learned as much from the YTP residents as the residents have learned from them. “Hearing the stories these young men have to tell can be just as valuable for us to learn about ourselves as the skills we hope to help the clients learn,” Bryan said.

My family was affected by the government shutdown and, while it was difficult, we continued to trust in God. Catholic Charities was such a blessing to our family. ... I have submitted a donation ... to say thank you. ... It is my hope that the donation will assist you in helping others, as you did my family.”

Federal Government Worker

When the Government Closed,

*workers found
open arms*

Catholic Charities is accustomed to helping the most vulnerable populations. In early 2019, however, the agency faced a unique challenge: helping government workers pay their bills during a government shutdown.

For the month of January, thousands of workers were forced to stay home while their bills poured in, unsure when they would receive their next paycheck.

The people affected by the shutdown never thought they would have to seek help to pay for basic expenses. But for more than a month, they found themselves on the receiving end of charitable donations.

Thanks to generous gifts from the United Way and anonymous Catholic Charities donors, Catholic Charities stepped in to assist some furloughed workers pay their basic living expenses. Up to $500 a worker was offered to cover necessities such as rent, food, car payments, child care, and medical services.

Among those served was a 20-year employee at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, who drained her savings to keep up with mounting bills. She called the assistance from Catholic Charities much-appreciated relief that helped her regain a sense of security.

The agency helped more than 260 workers in the District of Columbia and Maryland, distributing about $140,000. Additionally, more than 150 workers received a week's worth of food in SHARE grocery packages.

While furloughed workers came to Catholic Charities with a feeling of despair, many left with a renewed sense of hope. In turn, some felt compelled to give back. Once the government reopened, a U.S. Coast Guard employee sent Catholic Charities a thank-you note with a $100 donation included.

Children of Different Abilities

learn and grow

When Tamika and Natalie each moved to Montgomery County, they had no idea how much it would change the lives of their sons, Julius and Hayden. For years, both women struggled to find aftercare programs for their children with autism.

When they arrived at Catholic Charities' Community Companions program, Julius and Hayden were nonverbal and each faced his own unique issues. Julius' behavioral issues affected his relationships with others, and Hayden couldn't sit still for more than a minute. Julius was dismissed from another program because of his behavior, and Hayden didn't talk or make eye contact.

But everything changed once the boys enrolled in Community Companions, a child care program for children with disabilities. The program's staff takes an individualized approach to helping each child learn functional skills like handling money and writing to ease the transition into adulthood. Teachers like Madeleine Touray see beyond disabilities and take time to recognize and encourage the skills and talents students have.

After spending time with Julius in the after-school program, staff members learned that he enjoyed helping other students and displayed leadership qualities. They developed a personalized plan to harness these attributes and build on them through special activities that also taught him important life skills.

With his behavior dramatically improved, he is a completely different child, his mother, Tamika, says. Julius has learned to control his impulses and to communicate in positive ways.

For Hayden, structure and repetition were the keys to his success. Before he joined Community Companions, his day of learning ended in the early afternoon. Using common imagery like stop signs and other traffic icons, Hayden participates in fun activities aimed at helping him practice self-control and familiarizing him with symbols that can keep him safe.

The most profound moment for his mother, Natalie, came one afternoon when she arrived to pick him up. After months of focused, consistent practice, Hayden said the word "mom" for the first time. Since then, Hayden has expanded his vocabulary to say, "I love you."

The staff at Community Companions understands that children's disabilities can affect their whole family and improving their functional skills can lead to positive ripple effects not just for their loved ones, but their entire community. Tamika and Julius, and Natalie and Hayden are living proof of that.

Everything changed when we came to Community Companions. They want these kids to succeed as adults.”

Tamika

Community Companions is making a huge difference for me and my family. You can tell that the teachers here care and they can see beyond his disability.”
